Guerrilla Training by C.I.A.

To the Editor:

In his informative news report on Micronesia (Oct. 30), Robert Trumbull notes that "the Central Intelligence Agency used part of Saipan Island from 1953 to 1962 to train Chinese Nationalist guerrillas."

What are the implications of this news? First, that we have no moral right to complain about Cuba's efforts to train guerrillas in Latin America. Second, that our posture on Taiwan may be somewhat more than defensive. Third, that the C.I.A. may still be a significant factor in determining our relations with the Peking Government. Fourth, that a U.N. Trust Territory was being used for purposes inconsistent with the U.N. Charter.

Perhaps the dissenters from United States Government policies are not so much the youthful demonstrators as is the C.I.A.
